Hall Announces New Office Location in Portland's Old Port District

November 1, 2011

Portland, Maine – Hall Internet Marketing – a Maine technology enabled, internet marketing firm, recently announced that they have moved their headquarters to a new office building in Portland Maine's Old Port District.

The new two story office has been recently renovated and has views of Portland's scenic harbors. It is located on Danforth Street - a part of the historic Old Port and just minutes from Interstate 295 and the Casco Bay Bridge. Hall's office is also a part of the epicenter for the newly established Casco Bay Technology Hub.

This latest move is the second need to move in 4 years for the company due to growth. "We are happy to be in town and very pleased to be part of the Casco Bay Technology Hub," said President Tom Hall. "We leased 6300 sq. ft., and as we continue to grow, we should be able to expand within this building to meet demand." The new space has expanded employee facilities, multiple co-working spaces for staff collaboration, and better accommodations for working with clients in-house.

The move to the Old Port enables Hall Internet Marketing to bolster their community involvement. The new space features multiple common areas that the company hopes to utilize with an educational programming schedule for area businesses and solopreneurs.
